History of the Randall Family

This branch of the Randall family is descended from John Randall and Elizabeth Morton, who came from Clerkenwell, St. James Parish, London, England, in 1667.

John Randall was born in Bath, England, in 1629. His father, Matthew Randall, was Mayor of the city in 1627. John moved to London, and became a silk manufacturer.

In the troublesome reign of Charles the Second, owing to the plague, the fire in London, and report of the Dutch Invasion, John, with his wife and babe, followed his wife's brother, Sir William Morton, to America, in 1667, where he could enjoy freedom and religious liberty.

Genealogy of

He settled first in Newport, and then in Westerly, Rhode Island. The second son, Stephen, married Miss Abigail Sabin and had eight children.

Stephen's eldest son, Samuel, married Miss Joanna Kiser. He, being of a roving disposition, moved to the wilds of Long Island, where he purchased several thousand acres in Suffolk County, between Middle Island and Wading River, little of which had ever been cultivated.

Samuel's eldest son, Stephen, married Miss Elizabeth Swezey, daughter of Stephen Swezey, a neighbor living about four miles to the West.

Passing to and fro, they thus made a roadway which has ever since been a public highway. The father, Samuel, in the meantime, had lost his wife and married Miss Jennings and moved to Connecticut.

The War of the Revolution broke out when Stephen was a young man. He cast his lot with the Continentals. Nearly all his neighbors, however, especially those in Wading River, joined the British. He lived in a sparsely settled section on the main road between Wading River and the South side of Long Island, which was the road used by the British when they crossed over from Connecticut. The soldiers made it very uncomfortable for him by using his barns for their horses, and feeding them on the best at hand.

The Randall Family

Mr. Randall soon grew tired of this, and formed a company for home protection. They called themselves the Minute Men, and he was made the commander. They did good service until Mr. Randall was captured.

Two soldiers were taking him to Halifax, when they stopped at a Tory's house in Wading River, to get dinner. They left Mr. Randall bound in the kitchen with the Tory's wife. While she was preparing dinner she set him at liberty, telling him that she would not inform his captors for two or three hours. He hurried home, got his gun, dog, and some warm clothing, and remained in hiding until peace was declared. The Minute Men then disbanded, but without notifying the Government, so thus do not appear as veterans.

The old gun remains in the possession of the family, and is highly prized.

Mr. Randall was a peaceful, hard-working man, and as his children in turn married and were ready to settle down, he had a farm for them. They founded the village of Ridgeville, sometimes called Randall town.

The descendants all have the same sturdy nature and without exception are good, honorable citizens.

Stephen Morehouse Randall, the compiler of this work, was born on the property originally purchased in 1738 by Samuel Randall. He attended the village school when a boy. There were but two families in the district that were not Randalls.

He came to the City of Brooklyn when a young man in 1864, and went into the Building business, and has built a great number of fine buildings, including Churches, Schools, Libraries, etc.

Mr. Randall is connected with a number of institutions: Director of the Seventeenth Ward Bank, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Trustee of the East Brooklyn Savings Bank; member of the Building Trades Club and Manufacturers Association of N. Y.; Manager of the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A.; one of the Board of Directors of the Brooklyn Church Society; Home for the Aged, and many other kindred institutions.

He belongs to the New York Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, is a Trustee and Treasurer of the same.

In getting up this work he has been greatly assisted by his cousin, Asa S. Randall of Woodhaven, L. I., Jason L. Randall of New London, Conn., Mrs. Alice R. Ritch of Port Jefferson, L. I., and Estelle J. Randall of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Note

In compiling this work, I have endeavored to obtain the correct dates of births, marriages, and deaths, but I presume some errors have been made.

I think I have the names of all the Randalls in our branch of the family.

Very truly,
STEPHEN M. RANDALL,
